BASIC MOUNTAINEERING COURSE AT NIMAS, ARUNACHAL PRADESH

2DGBN organized BMC-42, in which CDT Karan Singh from 7DBN Ram Lal Anand got the opportunity to be a part of BMC-42 at NIMAS, Arunachal Pradesh. The duration of this course was 28 days, divided into 4 weeks.

In the first week, trainees experienced events like mountain PT, sports wall climbing, a 1-mile test, and small treks. The cadets went through extensive training for the upcoming mountaineering challenges. In this week, CDT Karan Singh from Ram Lal Anand College secured 3rd position in the 1-mile test.

In the second week, cadets moved to the next campsite at New Meiling at 8500 ft, which was 120 km away from NIMAS at 6000 ft. At New Meiling, cadets engaged in rock craft and trekking with loads and did an amazing trek to Thimbu village. There were five bases in the course: 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9. At the 5th base, cadets did jumaring, and at the remaining bases, they had the opportunity to practically implement the theory of rock craft learned at NIMAS.

Trainees learned to make natural and artificial bases, knots, and hitches. This was a crucial part, as the rope is considered the lifeline of a mountaineer. At the end of the week, they had their test, which involved climbing the 6th and 7th bases. The next campsite was Mago, the longest trek from New Meiling, covering a distance of 26 km and reaching an altitude of 11,700 ft.

Third Week

The next day, trainees trekked to the next campsite, Jithang, at 13,000 ft. Here, the survival test was conducted, where the trainees had to spend a full day surviving on the raw food provided by the institute and make their own shelter. The following day, trainees departed for Mirathang at 14,500 ft. Here, the theory class on ice craft was conducted. It also involved a trek to Rani Jheel and three days of ice craft training, with two days for climbing practice on the glacier wall and the third day dedicated to the ice craft test.

Fourth Week

This week involved trekking back to New Meiling over two days. In New Meiling, trainees learned the techniques of stream crossing and ladder launch (used to cross crevices). The next day, the endurance test was conducted, which involved covering 8 km with a load in 1 hour. On the same day, we returned to our NIMAS institute. The new day started with a written test of 50 marks. On the final day, we had our closing address by Major Mehboob. This unforgettable experience taught us skills that will remain engraved in our minds and souls. CDT Karan Singh from Ram Lal Anand College experienced significant personal growth.

I really feel that I have become a better version of myself.

Combined Annual Training Camp'23

The NCC unit of Ram Lal Anand College attended its mandatory yearly training at the Combined Annual Training Camp (CATC) organized at the DG NCC campus by our 7DBN unit from May 15th to May 24th. Each and every cadet who underwent training was braced for what the camp held for them and thrilled for a new experience.

At 0630 hrs, cadets reported at the DG NCC campus located in Delhi Cantt beside the famed Cariappa Parade Ground, and the journey began. We entered through gate no. 2 and were met by our PI staff, who were equally eager to meet us. They helped us with documentation, which was done in a temporary tent. This was another new experience for cadets, giving them a glimpse of how work gets done in the military. Cadets from other colleges as well as schools also reported. After swift documentation of all cadets, which was completed around 1000 hrs, we were allotted our barracks where we would stay for the entire duration of the camp. We all cleaned the rooms, arranged our essentials, made our beds, and then relaxed, eagerly waiting for what the camp had in store for us.

In the evening, we fell in and were taught firing lessons. Our instructors carefully and slowly showed us how to first get into the firing position, handle the rifle, carefully maneuver its parts to load the bullet, take aim, and shoot. They told us safety precautions and advised us not to hurry and to take our time, as they would be guiding us during firing. After this, we had our roll call where we were instructed about our schedule for the next day, and then we went to rest.

From the next day, our grueling schedule began. It was like this:

0600 hrs: Fall in for P.T.
0715 hrs: Breakfast
0800 hrs: Fall in for Drill
1000 hrs: Lecture
1300 hrs: Lunch
1600 hrs: Lecture/Drill/Culturals/Competitions
1900 hrs: Roll call
2130 hrs: Lights out

This was the basic routine we followed every day during the entire duration of the camp. There were minor variations depending on the day's specifics or events, but the basic structure remained the same.

On the second day, i.e., May 16th, the C.O. of the camp, Col. O.P. Rai, addressed all the cadets. He gave his introductory speech, welcomed all of us to the camp, and informed us about the events we would participate in during our stay. He also outlined the dos and don'ts of the camp. His motivational talk helped many cadets get through difficult times during the camp.

Our camp activities can be divided into four broad parts:
- Drill
- Lectures
- Firing
- Competition

Starting with drill, we learned many new things from our well-experienced P.I. instructors, who taught us with great interest. They taught us the intricacies of marching, helped correct our posture, and fine-tuned our drill. They also taught us DST, which is used as a mode of assessing cadets in their certification exams, selections in RD and many other camps, and in the Best Cadet Competition.

Regarding lectures, we were taught a diverse set of topics. Some lectures were centralized, while others were delivered in smaller groups. The topics for centralized lectures ranged from traffic rules and fire safety demonstrations to social media usage to promote NCC and online safety. In our smaller groups, we learned about guns, warfare, ambush, and map reading. These lectures were greatly helpful for cadets, providing valuable perspectives, insights, and practical knowledge. For example, the social media lecture offered a modern perspective, the SSB lecture provided guidance for the future, and the lecture on traffic rules emphasized the importance of following rules and raising awareness in society.

We also got our first experience of firing at the camp. Cadets were taken in groups to the firing range and were allowed to fire. It was a totally safe and secure environment, which helped first-timers gather their courage and fire. We had our wonderful instructors beside us whenever we needed them, and they helped us patiently each time. Overall, the experience was wonderful.

Regarding competitions, we had a range of events: extempore, painting, singing (group/solo), dancing (group/solo), tug of war, line layout, and best cadet. We participated in all events enthusiastically. Each event provided a different experience for us. Selecting cadets to take part in an event, preparing for the event by managing time in such a busy schedule, and then participating wholeheartedly was a great process. We had to decide who would compete, as everyone was eager to participate, but only a few could be chosen, so we had to select the best. We also worked as a team for competitions like line layout and tug of war, as teamwork was essential to win.

Our cadet Ayush Sharma won the extempore competition, and Yogesh Kataria was named best cadet. In team events, we won tug of war and line layout. As the competitions continued every day, they culminated in a grand campfire, attended by ADG Maj Gen SV Vishwash Rao, Sena Medal Bar. The top cultural performances were selected and presented before him. He also awarded all the winners of different competitions and addressed the gathering. He gave us the mantra, "Once a cadet, always a cadet." We won some and lost some, but it was a fruitful experience as we learned a lot. As they say, "Participation is more important than winning."

We also had a visit to the National War Memorial and India Gate on the morning of May 20th. We departed from our camp in buses and reached India Gate. We saw the magnificent beauty of India Gate, which was built to honor the soldiers of the British Indian Army who fought for the British in World War I in many difficult battles around the world. The names of many soldiers are engraved on India Gate. After that, we entered the National War Memorial complex. It was a surreal feeling. We read stories of the valor of the Indian Army that were written on the walls. Overall, the visit had a profound impact on us, as we even discussed the stories of the valor of men in uniform among ourselves.

We also got an opportunity to attend an event in which State Defense Minister Shri Ajay Bhatt ji and DG NCC Lt. Gen Gurbir Singh attended. They came to flag off an expedition of NCC cadets to Mt. Yunam (6111 meters). The team leader presented their plan to the minister. A contingent of 27, including 18 cadets with 11 girl cadets, was in the expedition team. It was an expedition of NCC cadets, starting after a three-year break due to COVID. Shri Ajay Bhatt, who himself was an NCC cadet, addressed the evening gathering and motivated the visiting team and all the NCC cadets present.

As it's said time and tide waits for none. Day by day our camp came to an end but not without great learning. On 24 may we gathered in same hall where our C.O. sir gave introductory address but this time for farewell speech. He addressed us with a wonderful speech. He instructed us to take the learnings we learnt here in daily life as NCC ambassador. After that we bid adieu to camp with heavy heart and a bag full of experience. We learnt many thing at camp which can basically be divided into two parts.

First can be called discipline. Apart from learning basics of discipline such as punctuality, uniform, shaving the camp helped us to develop a dynamic sense of discipline filled with qualities like leadership, initiative, coordination as many more which we inculcated through many activities and lessons undertaken at the camp.

Second was unity. We cadets of different backgrounds came together and lived ten days together. The ten days was like ten years. We got know each other better, help each other in their tasks, share happiness and joy with each other, participate in team events and did basically everything together. This basically help to understand each other better.we were united than ever before when we got out of the camp.

This both learning together makes together "unity and discipline" and which is motto of NCC. As we reflect on our camp while preparing this report, all that can be felt is these qualities as our takeaway from camp.
